

London hosted JOTA station GB3BPH. The Bureau's Regional Office in Mexico City operated for the first time with XE1ASM.

The 4th Camden Group in New South Wales, Australia taking part in the 4th JOTA with VK2ADA.

The 5th JOTA 1962

A special JOTA Badge was produced from Les Mitchell's design and a leaflet, "Getting the Most from JOTA" was put together in English. It subsequently came out in many other languages. Sixty-three countries took part.

The Australian Scout Leader magazine of October 1962 headlined: "Any Scout can participate in this Jamboree!"

Anybody who has taken part once, wants to do so again, said the World JOTA Report.

The 6th JOTA 1963

The new Canadian Scout H.Q. was completed on the outskirts of Ottawa in 1963, and VE3WSB started to use that for JOTA. There was tremendous enthusiasm for JOTA among Canadian Scouts and each year there were around 400 Scout stations in operation. This was reflected in the number of visitors to VE3WSB. The cafeteria where the three stations were installed was packed throughout the weekend - sometimes even at night. Manufacturers seemed to fall over themselves to lend us the most modern equipment, while we were besieged by the press, radio and TV. For the Bureau, this was really the heyday of JOTA. VE3WSB continued to use the Canadian Scout H.Q. for JOTA for the next three events. Visitors still packed the room and our station appeared every year on TV and radio and in the press.

In total 53 of our 80 member Associations were active in JOTA.

In South-Africa, at 24th Pretoria Sea Scouts, "the boys could not be lured from the equipment even with the offer of a swim".

A 14 Watt portable station operated from Brownsea Island, UK, by the 1st Oakdale troop in pouring rain.

Scouts in Huddersfield, United Kingdom having fun in the 6th JOTA with GB3CMS.

The 7th JOTA 1964

Scouts proved very helpful and effective" and recommend joint activities.

In Singapore, 9M4SJ had a marathon QSO with Scouts in Ceylon: they exchanged songs for over an hour!

The 9 Scout groups in Lourenco Marques, the capital of Mozambique joined together at CR7BS and talked to 43 Scout groups in South Africa.

Scouts in Pakistan operated for the first time with a station of the Signal Battalion in Dacca and contacted many stations using Morse Code.

The operator at 5Z4KSA in Kenya was recalled to England, but the Scouts managed to find a replacement the very evening before JOTA.

Big is beautiful... in 1964 the amateur radio equipment was sometimes larger than the Scouts, like here at this JOTA station in Peru.

